

Catalan Journal of Communication & Cultural Studies

Call for articles. Issue 4.1. Spring 2012.

Deadline for submitting works: September 30th 2011

The Catalan Journal of Communication & Cultural Studies (CJCS) is committed to publishing research and scholarship on the analysis of media and culture. The journal pays attention to original works, particularly but not exclusively, related to the Catalan cultural and media systems.

CJCS's approach is multidisciplinary, publishing articles dealing directly or through a comparative frame with media and communication history, media and cultural policies, audience and reception studies, cultural and national identity, media discourses, intercultural communication, sport and media, language and media language uses, new media and the internet, gender studies, cinema, popular culture, media and cultural industries, public relations, advertising, tourism and cultural heritage.

CJCS publishes two issues per year, one special in fall and one miscellaneous in spring. We invite contributions from scholars, researchers and professionals from around the world working in the above-mentioned fields who wish to publish their works in a journal with a truly international scope. We especially encourage young researchers and doctoral students to submit articles.

Articles should be between 6,000-8,000 words. They must be based on original research or offer well grounded theoretical contributions, they must be written in a clear and concise style in English and they must not be under consideration by any other publication. The articles are submitted to a blind peer reviewing process and must follow the style guidelines of the journal. The deadline for submitting an article for the issue 4.1 (Spring 2012) is September 30th 2011.
